

Communication with AI: Philosophical Perspectives

Editors: Herman Cappelen (HKU) and Rachel Katharine Sterken (HKU)

“The talking of the bot with itself”—Transformers for inner speech

Cameron Buckner

Understanding AI: De-anthropocentrized Interpretationalism

Herman Cappelen (HKU) and Josh Dever (Texas-Austin)

Learning from Machines

Andy Egan (Rutgers), Brent Harrison (Kentucky), Tim Sundell (Kentucky) and Stephen Ware (Kentucky)

Alien Languages and AI Systems

Matti Eklund

The Strange Semantics and Metasemantics of Artificial Intelligence

Nat Hansen (Reading), Jumbly Grindrod (Reading) and J.D. Porter (Penn)

Artificial Thought

Anandi Hattiangadi

Uncanny Performance, Divergent Competence: Biases as Principled Barriers to Human-Machine Communication

Gabbrielle Johnson (Claremont-McKenna) and Gabe Dupre (Keele)

What do word embeddings ‘mean’?

Fintan Mallory

Strong AI and the Foundations of Ethics

Tristram McPherson (OSU) and David Plunkett (Dartmouth)

Grammatical Competence and Artificial Intelligence

Raphaël Millière (Columbia)

Explainable AI

Laurie Paul (Yale)

The Alignment Problem in Human-AI Communication

Jessica Pepp (Uppsala), Eliot Michaelson (KCL) and Rachel Sterken (HKU)

Has NLP Run Out of Context?

Jonathan Phillips (Dartmouth) and Tracey Mills (Dartmouth)

Wittgenstein, the lion, and the automaton

Diane Proudfoot (Canterbury)

TBD

Regina Rini (York)

Porous Minds: When Does Thinking Become Communication?

Luke Roelofs (NYU)

The Self Comes in Degrees

Susanna Schelllenberg (Rutgers)

Talking to Social Robots

Mona Simion (Glasgow)

Robbie Williams (Leeds)

Robo-interpretationism.

Fairness of Algorithmic Predictions from an Evidentialist Perspective

Jiji Zhang (HKBU)